

Using Science Experiments to Tell Stories

Company Info

Using science experiments to tell stories, we perform interactive, high-energy shows for schools, libraries, scouts, parties, or anywhere there are kids and families. Through this synergy of science and storytelling, we engage the audience by combining these seemingly different ideas and using the resulting reaction to educate and entertain! Job Description

Here is an opportunity to perform, to teach, and to have fun! We are looking for self-motivated candidates to perform solo 45-minute Sciencetelling shows throughout New Jersey and Pennsylvania. This is a part-time, flexible position. A Scienceteller is responsible for picking up supplies, driving to the show location, performing the show, and driving to the next location – all within specific time frames. Continual paid training is provided and all mileage is fully reimbursed.

Additional responsibilities: Learn the components of the shows, which include the story, the science, and the actions; Keep open communication channels with the customer the day of the performance; Maintain and organize the administrative aspects of your performances and training.

Job Qualifications

- Must crave constant improvement
- Must be able to memorize a script
- Must be organized, responsible, and reliable
- Must be animated and ridiculously enthusiastic
- Must be able to adapt to new situations and environments
- Must be great with kids (interact without being condescending)
- Must be able to perform in front of both small and large groups
- Must be great with adults (interact professionally, but with a sense of humor)
- Must have a reliable car and be willing to drive at least an hour (full mileage reimbursement)
- Must be physically active (climbing on chairs, running, crawling on the floor, carrying crates)

All other skills, such as science knowledge and storytelling, will be taught through comprehensive paid training. There is no need to be a scientist!

Details

Wages are $60.00 per performance, plus paid training and full mileage reimbursement. Hours are flexible.
