

You are invited to attend A Maintainers Movement Fellow Event

Who Cares? A conversation about the value of repair and maintenance from fixing bikes to building upkeep.

Wednesday, May 4th | 12–1 PM EDT | Register Here

Does a tear in your shirt mean the end of its use? Can a rusty bike be reborn again? How can you care for the worn floor in your home? Or the land your house is built on? And how does it all connect?

Join Maintainers Movement Fellows Leila Behjat and Sam Bennett as they introduce designers Sequoyah Hunter-Cuyjet and Catherine Murphy, and architects Betty Rexrode, and Damon Strub to share personal stories of care from small objects to multi-building units.

The Construction industry's annual embodied carbon is responsible for 11% of global GHG emissions from new building materials. It is imperative that renovation and maintenance is prioritized over the new: new products, new construction. Together, we will explore the role and perceived value of repair and trace a path towards a more sustainable stewardship.

This is a no-cost event, however if you wish to purchase a pay-what-you-wish ticket, you can do so by choosing that Attendee Ticket tier when you register for the event. Proceeds will be used for Movement Fellow speaker honoraria and event operating costs. Thank you! Register for the event here!
